

SCAVENGER HUNT

MINDBENDER

Think scavenger hunts at the BMA have gotten too easy? Well then, we think it's time to take this new hunt to the max!

The images below have been manipulated and distorted to add an additional level of difficulty to this challenge. Search the galleries and see if you can find them all!

This figure represents the Zapotec god of rain.

Head to the Pre-Columbian hallway on the second floor to see a tongue in the shape of a lightning bolt!.

Have you ever thought you would die from a broken heart?

Head to the American gallery on the first floor to see what is ailing Antiochus.

The artist Reg Davidson made this totem pole to represent his family.

Head to the Native American gallery on the second floor to see what animals are included.

Raise your hand if you have ever had to stand still for a family portrait.

Head to the Dutch gallery on the first floor to see where the family is getting their portrait taken.

This captain was a member of the Seventeenth Light Dragoons.

Head to the English gallery on the first floor to see what is written on his helmet.

This small wooden carving of the Buddha was once entirely covered in gold leaf.

Head to the Chinese gallery on the second floor to be dazzled by the gold that remains.

How often do you get to see a pug playing guitar?

Head to the 18th c. European gallery on the first floor to see the two French children playing along.

Would you believe that this sculpture is actually a mask?

Head to the African gallery on the second floor to see heavy mask made for the Epa masquerade.

TAKE HOME COLORING ACTIVITY

ZONE OUT

After searching for all of that mind-bending art, your eyes and body could use a little rest and relaxation. Grab some crayons, colored pencils, or markers and get lost in the intricate design below.

Mandalas

Circular mandalas provide a focus for meditation with a central point—a point from which all things are possible. From this sacred center generates infinite possibilities and potential. Coloring mandalas provides a chance to meditate and express creativity.

HANNAH
ADAMSON
2017