

SCAVENGER HUNT

Something Sweet for Summer!

Summertime weather is here and we all need a little something sweet to beat the heat! Luckily there is something in every gallery to satisfy that sweet tooth.

We've picked out some of our favorite works celebrating yummy treats. Search the galleries and see if you can find them all!

Is this a tart or a pie? It's hard to tell, but one thing we do know is it looks yummy!

Head to the 18th c. European gallery on the first to find this small, porcelain work. Do you think this jester is about to throw this pie at someone!

Grapes are the perfect snack on a spring day. Although, it is really hard to stop at just one!

Head to the Dutch gallery on the first floor to find this painting. And be sure to check out the other creatures crawling around the table!

Honey is super sweet and a great addition to any treat. But honey is also used to help heal sore throats and treat mosquito bites.

Head to the Wedgwood gallery on the second floor to find this adorable honeypot shaped like a honeycomb!

Raise your hand if you like the taste of freshly squeezed lemonade in the summer. In art, lemons often symbolize luxury, love and longevity.

Head to the American gallery on the first floor to find this bittersweet fruit.

An apple a day not only keeps the doctor away, but keeps that sweet tooth satisfied. Apples are in the top two most popular fruits in the US.

Head to the American gallery on the first floor to make your mouth water for this apple by artist Georgia O'Keeffe.

Pineapples are a refreshing fruit in the summer. In art, pineapples symbolize prosperity and hospitality.

Head over to the 19th c. European gallery on the first floor and answer this one question. Do you like pineapple on your pizza?

Do you like a little cream in your coffee or tea? This tiny jug was made to hold sweet cream at teatime.

Head to the English gallery on the first floor to see the summertime goats, bees, and butterflies adorning the jug.

In China, pomegranates are symbols of longevity and blessings for many children. Perhaps as many children as there are seeds in the fruit!

Head to the Chinese gallery on the second floor to see this juicy offering.

TAKE HOME COLORING ACTIVITY

Honey, I'm home!

Did you find the honey pot in the Wedgwood gallery while on your scavenger hunt? Did you know that when the weather gets warmer and flowers start to bloom, honeybees will leave their hives in search of flowers to make honey? It's true!
